Your guide

Los Cabos offers several ways to experience the underwater world, from easy coastal snorkeling outings to longer excursions farther from the main resort areas. Water conditions change, and the right location depends on the season, weather and operator guidance.

Know the locations

• Santa Maria and Chileno Bay are well-known beaches along the Tourist Corridor and are often considered for snorkeling when conditions are suitable.

• Cabo Pulmo is a protected marine area known for its reef ecosystem. Visits should follow local conservation rules and authorized tour guidance.

• The best location on a particular day depends on visibility, swell, wind, currents and other sea conditions.

Choose the right excursion

• A beach-based outing may suit travelers who want a simpler experience close to shore, subject to safe conditions.

• A boat-based snorkeling trip may reach sites that are less convenient to access independently. Confirm the route and time spent in the water.

• Ask whether snorkeling equipment is provided, whether flotation devices are available and how guides supervise guests.

Safety and preparation

• Follow lifeguard, guide and captain instructions. Do not enter the water when conditions are unsafe or when local authorities advise against it.

• Use properly fitted mask, snorkel and fins. Ask for flotation support if you are not a confident swimmer.

• Avoid touching coral, marine animals or underwater structures. Do not stand on reef habitat.

• Use reef-conscious sun protection and follow local rules about products allowed in protected areas.

What to bring

• Swimwear, towel and a change of clothes.

• Sun protection, water and a secure bag for personal items.

• Any personal prescription items you may need during the outing.

• A waterproof camera only if you can use it without disturbing wildlife or compromising safety.

Planning note
